

Fashion extravaganza

Errol Arendz, Cape Town's young designer whose extravagant creations are the wow of fashion-conscious (and wealthy) jet-setters from all over Southern Africa, will present his latest fashion fantasia at the Mount Nelson Hotel tomorrow night to eager buyers who can't wait to get his fabulous clothes off the rails and into their own wardrobes.

Errol's creations are so sought after that clients come regularly from Windhoek and Johannesburg, and even from Europe to buy clothes from the friendly, talented young designer.

His taste veers to the dramatic, with exquisite fabrics made even more stunning by the addition of gold and silver embroidery, richly encrusted beading and clever pleating.

He believes that women should be women and makes clothes that simply take your breath away by their sheer romance and beauty.

Many of the outfits being shown tomorrow night have already been sold, and the chances are their won't be one left in his studio on Friday morning. The culmination of the show will be nine magnificent wedding dresses that have been specially made and are being kept under close wraps until the big night.

Tomorrow night's show is in aid of the Animal Welfare Society.
